Using vocabulary games to enrich your students' critical thinking process

SHARE VOCABULARY

Tell me and I forget. Teach me and I remember. Involve me and I learn. Chinese proverb

How is vocabulary usually taught?

LISTS and MEMORIZING

This only activates short-term memory

AS COMPARED TO COGNITIVE LEARNING:

- 21st Century Skills:
- Adaptability
- Complex communication skills
- Non-routine problem solving
- Self-management/self-development
- Systems thinking

A CRITICAL THINKER

- Raises questions or problems and formulates them clearly
- Uses abstract ideas to interpret relevant information
- Comes to well-reasoned conclusions
- Thinks open mindedly within alternative systems of thought
- Communicates effectively with others in figuring out solutions

Can we expose our students to more effective vocabulary learning?

LONG-TERM MEMORY SUGGESTIONS:

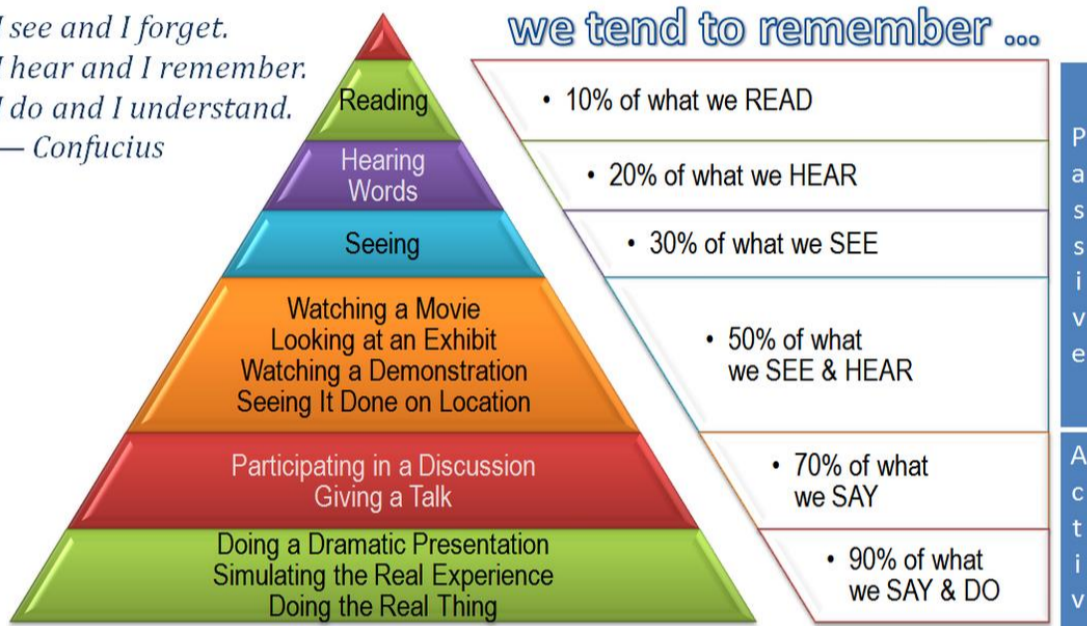

- Match the words to synonyms, antonyms, or definitions
- Creatively find association between words seemingly semantically unrelated
- Work out the meaning of a word using the surrounding linguistic context

Builds countless associations with other terms in the target language

Brief 'hands on' activity-Playing "Apples to Apples"

APPLES TO APPLES GAME

How to play:

- The first player-who is the judge-turns over the top green card and calls it out to the group.
- Each other player lays down a red card to “match” the green card.
- The judge mixes up the stack of cards and reads them to the group.
- Other players have to orally defend their red card choices.
- The judge decides who has the best match and gives the green card to the winner.
- The game goes until a set number of green cards has been won by a player.

HOMEWORK FOLLOW-UP

students need to transfer oral learning to written for retention
